

John Henshaw Architect Inc.

1666 West 75th Ave., Vancouver, BC, V6P 6G2

Versatility and innovation allowed John Henshaw Architect (JHA) to explore the different facets of the architecture industry, making them one of the most experienced professionals in the field. Its over 25 years of operations are marked with multiple Georgie Awards and life long memberships with the industry's biggest organizations. These include the Architectural Institute of British Columbia, Royal Architectural Institute of Canada (RAIC) and the National Kitchen+Bath Association (NKBA).

The firm's principal architect, John Henshaw, is a LEED-accredited professional, so it's no surprise the firm is also known for incorporating energy-efficient designs into many of its projects. As a designer of stunning homes, Henshaw's success is well-documented by the design scene's trade publications. Vancouver Home, Boulevard, BC Home and Garden, and Perspectives on Design: Western Canada have all featured many of the company's award-winning projects.

Architectures that play with the complementing elements of the eastern and western influences can be found in the firm's portfolio. Its Contemporary, Modern, and Classical designs introduce the firm's mastery in the old and new language of architecture. Its Wiltshire Residence, for instance, is a 5,800-square-foot project that highlights the company's fluency when it comes to creating classic Tudor-inspired living spaces. With this style, you'll find large, rectangular windows, complex gabled roofing, brick wall tapestry, and the use of dominant wooden elements.
